

THE SEASON NOBODY WATCHED

Nobody saw this one. It counted anyway.

No crowd, no clock, no result in any paper but this one. One ordinary training week, reported like the event it actually was.

Tuesday, 5:50 a.m. Attendance: zero. The hill did not care either way.

Halftone: Between Sundays studio

The biggest game of the week had no tickets. It started before sunrise on a hill with no name, and the only one keeping score was the one running it.

That is how most of a season actually goes. The part people see – the race, the day it all works – lasts an hour. The part that decides it happens on dark mornings, in empty places, with nobody watching and nothing to prove it happened.

The Bible is blunt about this. It says the Father sees in secret. Not might see. Sees. Which means the empty hill on Tuesday had an attendance of one more than anybody thought, and the week counted – every unwatched kilometre of it.

Whatever your version of the dark morning is, it is on the board. MORE SPORT

NEXT ISSUE →

THIS WEEK	DISTANCE	WITNESSES	COUNTED
Monday	6.2 km	0	Counted
Tuesday	Rest	0	Counted
Wednesday	8.0 km	0	Counted
Thursday	6.2 km	1 dog	Counted
Friday	Rest	0	Counted
Saturday	14.5 km	0	Counted
Sunday	Walked	0	Counted

GO DEEPER

Matthew 6:6 – “seen in secret.”

Galatians 6:9 – on not quitting before harvest.

1 Corinthians 9:24–27 – training, by a man who ran.